

How You Can Help Your Loved One With Diabetes

Diabetes is tough. When you have diabetes, you need to eat healthy food, stay active, control your weight, take your medicine, and check your blood glucose (sugar) to see how you are doing. And that's on top of handling all the other things in life!

No wonder a person with diabetes can feel stressed out and afraid. Good diabetes care also means controlling the ABCs of diabetes to reduce the risk of having a heart attack, a stroke, or other diabetes problems.

You want the best for your loved ones with diabetes—whether they are family members or friends. Maybe you are looking for ways to ease the pressure your mother feels. Or maybe you would like to help your husband take better control of his diabetes. It's a hard disease to handle alone. You can make a big difference in how well your loved one copes with diabetes.

B is for Blood Pressure

C is for Cholesterol

Use these tips to get started today

Tip 1. Learn about diabetes.

There is a lot to learn about living well with diabetes. Treatment is changing and we are learning more every day. You can use what you learn to help your loved one.

- Attend a class
- Search the Internet
- Ask a health care provider how you can learn more

Tip 2. Understand your loved one's diabetes.

Each person's experience with diabetes is different. What things are hard for your loved one to manage? What things are easy?

Tip 3. Find out what your loved one needs.

Try asking these 3 questions:

- What do I do that helps you with your diabetes?
- What do I do that makes it harder for you to manage your diabetes?
- What can I do to help you more than I do now?

Tip 4. Talk about your feelings.

Diabetes affects you, too. Telling your loved one how you feel can help both of you.

Tip 5. Offer practical help.

Instead of nagging, find ways to be helpful.
Ask what would help your loved one most.

- Offer to go on a visit to his or her health care team
- Find a safe place to walk or be more active
- Prepare tasty healthy meals

Tip 6. Try a new approach.

When things aren't going right, try something new.
Find one thing that works and build from there.

Tip 7. Get help.

Many people can help you help your loved one with diabetes.

- Find a diabetes support group in the health section of your newspaper or on the Internet
- Ask your health care provider about ways to get help if your loved one is sad or depressed
- See the resource list for groups to contact
